Dear Sir:

I have made inquiries about the work and conduct of Mr. George Buchanan at the time that he was at the University. Everything that I have heard has been favourable. He was, I understand, a hard worker, a student who could be thoroughly relied upon to do his work. He took a degree in the General Course, graduating with a certificate of first class proficiency. I should think that he would make a faithful teacher, if you were to employ him.

Yours sincerely,

President.
